publican party than any daily paper now ublished there. This is, of course, intendad as an attack upon the Times, which adtertises itself in the country districts as "the anly Republican paper in New York," as well as upon its editor, Mr. Louis J. Jensings, of London. Indeed, many of the para graphs to which we have alluded contain very uncomplimentary remarks in reference to Mr. Jennings, which, being friendly to him, we cannot, of course, indorse. As a foreigner, who only a few years ago, allured by the sait of the editorship of the Times, decided to cast his fortunes with us, Mr. Jennings s doing as well as could be expected. To be sure he has not yet taken out his naturalization papers, for which we cannot help condemning him, and is still a British sublect, but we are confident that in a short time, as soon as he has fully satisfied him self in regard to our institutions, he will abjure his allegiance to the sovereign of When the House tired of motion to sus-Preat Britain and Ireland and come into full accord with American democratic ideas and principles.

It is only natural, after all, that strict party men, men who have the welfare of he Republican organization at heart, should be angry, and complain that an unnaturalized Englishman sits in the seat of Henry J. Raymond, and is the editor of the scading organ of the Republican party; the stitor to whom they shall be compelled to took for guidance and direction in 1876; venience and represent currency. They are out they should consider that this is only another evidence of the strength of the party; that no mistake, however mischievus, no blunder, however bad, can shake it in the confidence and respect of the people; save the trouble of frequent counting, but the that, even with a man like Mr. Jennings, holding the key of its position in journaltsm. it can still meet and conquer its ensm, it can still meet and conquer its en-emies. We know it is disheartening for Republican politicians and Republican edi-times over in the same day, in the same ors, especially when they look back to the manner that one five-dellar note may liquidate past and count over the names of forty different bills or accounts in the same those who fought the battles of Republi- day, if kept in active circulation. It is barely five years since Mr. Jennings was on the staff of 'the London Times, doing his work with ability and fidelity, winning a high place in British journalism as a supporter and defender of the British Crown and Constitution. In bringing him over to our side the Times, of New York, made an immense point and gained a strong ally and to cause all the evil; but if that be true in the champion for the Republican party. Suppose he had remained in New York as the correspondent of the British Thunderer, writing those scathing articles upon our Government and institutions, who can tell oil accidents happen to sober people. The coalwhat dire misfortune might have overtaken oil trade has increased incredibly in the last us? Mr. Jennings has the most supreme contempt for the men who are engaged in the administration of the American Government, and warns the British workingmen that they must not be led astray by the example of the United States. They must be loyal, dutiful, faithful subjects. But this was written five years ago, and the Repullican leaders who are endeavoring to buy presence where they are not welcome, and can the Express to represent them as they should cassly content themselves with the conviction be represented are not-altogether correct in that they would be neither happy nor would thinking that the same spirit that animates the book breathes every morning through the Times. Mr. Jennings is too honest and honorable for that. Although not a citizen of the republic, although he is not, never was, and does not pretend to be a Republican, he has nevertheless sold his pen to the republic and the Republican party, and he is doing his utmost to fulfill his contract. If the monarchy were to pay him better, he would serve it in an equally conscientious way. Let them only have a little patience and forbearance, and by '76 perhaps his education in American history, politics and geography will be finished.
